On Weekend Trip to Ankara

Kissinger Will Try Anew For a Cyprus Settlement

By Murrey Marder ROME, Nov. 4 (WP) -Secretary of State Henry Kissinger will seek to reopen negotiations on the Greek-Turkish Cyprus crisis this weekend in Ankara after a quick tour of the Middle from Romania to Yugoslavia to Rome, it was announced that he will visit the Turkish capital Friday and Saturday after his flying visits to Egypt, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Israel.

This jammed schedule thrusts Mr. Kissinger into a double diplomatic mission this week to try to repair damage to his person-alized negotiating strategy. The Ford administration faces a deadline of Dec. 10 imposed by Congress to produce evidence of "substantial progress" toward removing Turkish military force from Cyprus, a development that would prevent a complete ban on American military aid to Congress voted that threat to arms for Turkey after President Ford twice vetoed similar versions of the penalty. Mr. Kissinger is still bridling over that challenge to his negotiating anthority but it is adamantly denied in the Kissinger party that the trip to Ankara is simply "eyewash" placate Congress.

Contact With Athens Instead, it is said that Mr. Kissinger is now planning negotiat-ing explorations in Turkey which he would have undertaken even if Congress had not moved directly to impose its own deadlines. Mr. Kissinger is reported to have been "in detailed contact" with the Greek government about his trip to Turkey this weekend. The Athens government of Premier Constantine Caramanding a total withdrawal of some 40,000 Turkish troops who invaded Cyprus in July and August following the overthrow of Cypriot President Makarios. Mr. Kissinger's position is that these limitations, imposed on the ground that Turkish arms were sent to Cyprus in violation of American law, ignore what he and many other U.S. strategists see as overriding American interests in the eastern Mediterranean If the present heightened Arab-

Israeli tension resulting from decisions at the Arab summit meeting at Rabat last week should produce a new war in the Middle est, these strategists maintain, singer on Friday might help the Cypriot refugees to return to their homes.

Mr. Clerides's statement, issued by the government information office, increased speculation that Mr. Kissinger's visit would result in a Turkish gesture to allow some of the 200,000 Greek Cypriot refugees to return to their homes in the Turkish-oc-cupled part of the island.

By Dan Morgan WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (WP). -Since Secretary of State Henry Kissinger issued the call 13 months ago for the World Food Conference that starts in Rome tomorrow, several truths about the nature of the problem facing humanity have come into better

One is that powerful forces over which man seems to have little immediate coutrol have had a role in bringing about the food crisis. Global population is growing at a rate of 70 million a year. Not much can be done to slow it down before the year 2000, when the world'e population will be around 6.5 billion people, instead of the present 3.8 billion. The weather was catastrophically bad in both 1972 and 1974, with drought in Africa, early frosts in the American Great

U.K. Seen Cutting Secret Services

LONDON, Nov. 4 (AP).-Britain's secret services are to be reduced in size as part of the Labor government's decision to cut defense expenditures, the Daily Express deported today.

The report said that the cuts would affect the secret intelligence service operations abroad and the internal security service as well as every branch of military intelligence.

"The beads of these secret departments have warned the government that the savings can be made only by reducing manPlains, failure of the monsoon in India, floods in Bangladesh.

World production of wheat, corn, barley, oats, sorgbum and rice—the basic cereals on which people rely for protein and energy-has to increase by about 25 million metric tons a year to cope with the rising demand brought on by population growth and rising affluence.

Between 1971 and 1972, annual world output actually declined by 35 million tons. This year's output is also expected to be lower than the 1.265 billion tons produced in 1973, mainly because of poor weather.

Nature Not Alone

Yet if the delegates to the United Netions-sponsored conference are to make any headway, they will have to accept one other truth: Nature alone was not responsible for the problem.

Decisions-and procrastinationby political leaders in dozens of countries have contributed to the requiring political courage and a new level of maturity must be made if there are to be improve-

At the Rome conference, representatives of poor countries will almost certainly engage in ritual condemnation of the policies of the rich. They will demand more food assistance, more technical aid, more eredit. There is justice in that, because there is no more blatant example of global inequalities than the buge food surpluses in wealthy nations and the deficits in poor ones.

But the world food situation is,

"Disincentives" to increased countries have also had a major agricultural production exist in many countries. Farmers have been placed at the end of the line in eligibility for bank credits for investment in agriculture.

Priorities Elsewhere

The UN's Food and Agriculture Organization estimates that the average small farmer in South Asia, unable to obtain adequate credit, spends about $6 a hectare (2.47 acres) on his crop instead of the $20 to $80 needed to achieve maximum yields through the use of new seeds, pesticides and fertilizers. Industrial developement, the tourist business and military needs have often been assigned a higher priority than agricultural India made dramatic gains in food production in the 1960s and experts believe that the outlook for that country is not hopeless. Yet few observers believe that the Indian government has done all it could to increase farm pro-

In the last 12 years, India has financed two major wars with Pakistan as well as the development of nuclear devices. India this year is facing a food deficit in the range of 5 to 10 million

Many aspects of the pres food crisis are still murky. Not enough is known by policy makers majority of countries where hunger and malnutrition are said to widespread. All indications are that famine is already a reality in a number of areas in Africa and South Asia, but the statistics are often misleading.

Government decisions by rich

It is an ironic comment on global interdependence that the draining away of the world's grain reserves in 1972 can be traced, in part, to riots by Polish workers on the Baltic coast in December, 1970. The riots were about high-priced, low-quality

The Soviet Union took notice. Concerned about its own domestic tranquility, it decided to improve the diet of its population by increasing the component of grainfed red meat. After a bad harvest in 1972, Moscow bought grain from the United States and other producers on an unprecedented scale, rather than reduce Soviet livestock herds. Had the Soviet government chosen an opposite alternative susterity grain supplies now might be ample and prices might be lower.

Another example of the role that governments play was the cutback ordered on the cultivaworld prices and a seemingly inexhaustible surplus in the late 1960s. Between 1968 and 1970, the combined wheat screage of the United States, Canada, Australia and Argentina fell from over 50 million hecteres to under 33 mil-lion. Wheat production fell from over 80 million tons to under 60 million tons.

The Economic Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agri-culture estimates that 'If these four countries had maintained the wheat area they had in 1967 and 1968, yields obtained from 1969 through 1972 would have produced over 90 million tons more wheat."
The extent to which government actions in rich countries affect poor countries is only now being analyzed. The impact of the U.S. and international food-assistance programs of the 1960s is also being sed. Some economists feel that these programs enabled governments to postpone tough deci-sions, such as choosing between industrial or agricultural invest-ments and introducing population-control measures.

Despite the huge shipments of U.S. aid in the 1960s, the average per-person intake of calories in India is about what it was in

Doomsday Prophets

The suggestion that policy makere helped create the present situation and still have the power to rectify it is not popular with those who believe that the world is moving relentlessly toward a doomsdaylike reckoning. William Paddock, one provocative thinker on such subjects, has suggested that the era of major famines has arrived and that it is time for countries like the United States to start drawing up lists of which countries to save and which to write off as lost.

According to the Economic Research Service, the most difficult problem facing delegates to the conference in Rome is not how to increase the output of food, but rather how to distribute

Their analysis shows that food production grew faster than the population between 1954 and 1972. so that, on the avarage, the 3.8 billion people in the world in 1973 have 10 per cent more to eat than did the 2.5 billion people in the world in 1934.

In spite of their difficulties, the developing countries actually expanded their farm output faster than developed ones dur-ing those years. But in the developing nations, the gains were used up feeding populations that grew much faster than in rich

In short, the gains of the 1960s not distributed equally. More than half the increase in food output went to affluent countries with 30 per cent of world population, while the rest was spread among the poorer 70 per cent of the world. Moreover, the scientific revolution in agriculture has yet to be fully applied in the less developed world. The new fertilizers and seeds of high-yield strains of wheat, corn and rice have been concentrated in only a few countries so far, starting with Mexico in the 1940s and focusing lately on India and Pakistan. And in India and Pakistan, only a few provinces are using the methods. But even with the application of new technology, political will-power and imagination of leaders in rich and poor countries alike may still be the decisive factor in finding solutions. The agenda for the World Food Conference gives a hint of the political difficulties that lie ahead. The main "national and international programs of action" to be discussed are:

· Measures for increasing food production in developing coun-

 Policies for improving diets and nutrition in all countries. · Better exchanges of informs tion between countries about demand and supply, and the establishment of an international grain stockpile

Representatives of developing countries plainly feel that rich nations have a heavy responsibility to provide them with the technical aid, fertilizer and credit needed to expand their own pro-

Nixon Walks With Assistance; Fluid in Lung Worries Doctor

By Stuart Auerbach

ard Nixon improved enough today for his doctors to allow him to get out of bed for the first time since postoperative shock took him to the brink of death last Tuesday night.
They told his nurses at Long Beach Memorial Medical Center to help him take a few steps around his hospital room, but to watch very carefully that this exercise did not cause any un-usual changes in his heart rhythm or blood pressure. His doctors said that Mr.

Nixon, 61, "still continues to show gradual improvement" after having been taken off the critical list yesterday. They reported that his vital signs—pulse, blood pressure, respiration and temperature-remained stable.

But the doctors revealed today the appearance of what could a serious complication in Mr. Nixon's recovery—the presence of a small amount of fluid in his left lung. Dr. John Lungren, the president's principal physician, said that he is "concerned" over the fact that fluid has remained in the lung. The doctors are hoping that this fluid, which could cause a collapse of Mr. Nixon's lung and

LONG BEACH, Calif., Nov. 4 problems with his breathing, will (WP).—Former President Rich— be absorbed naturally.

For at least two days, they have been giving him treatments designed to keep his lungs expanded. They have ordered Mr. Nixon to cough frequently and to do deep-breathing exercises— normal instructions to a postsurgery patient to keep his lungs free of fluid.

Yesterday, the doctors revealed the start of positive-pressure-breathing treatments for 10 minutes every four hours. This treatment forces air under pressure into Mr. Nixon's lungs to keep them expanded.

Clotted Blood Dr. Lungren blamed the existence of fluid in Mr. Nixon'e on an "irritation of the diaphraem" that arose from a large mass of clotted blood that had collected in his left flank. This blood, which came from the massive internal bleeding that threw Mr. Nixon into shock last Tuesday, six hours after surgery, is pressing upward on his left Doctors operated on Mr. Nixon early last Tuesday morning to stop the potentially fatal flow to his lungs of clots formed as a result of phiebitis in his left leg.

"We both voted. I hope they're counted. It might be important. The President was referring to the absentee ballots cast by Mrs. Ford and himself.

Mr. Ford departed slightly from his prepared text, using the words "minority decision" rather than "minority rule" in urging

"Every eligible voter will send a message to Washington and to the world tomorrow," he said,

Those who cast their ballots "whether they vote for Republi-can or Democratic candidates or for others, will be voting 'yes' for our American tradition of government by the people and for the people," the President

"Everyone who can get to the polls and fails to go, who refuses to exercise the precious right of a free citizen to vote his or her honest conviction, is actually voting 'no' on our system of selfgovernment," Mr. Ford said.

As the President spoke, Democratic landslide appeared imminent in the first national election to reflect the effects of the Watergate scandal and a staggering economy.

The final pre-election survey the Associated Press shows that Democrats have a chance to win two-thirds control of both houses of Congress and a record number of governorships.

Democratic leaders predicted yesterday that the party would virtually sweep tomorrow's elections, while Republicans talked about holding down their losses. First Since Resignation

The balloting for 35 governorships, 34 Senate seats and all 435 House seats will be the first since Richard Nixon resigned as President in August and was pardoned by President Ford.

The election also comes amid mounting inflation and unemployment and national debate over what to do about both. Mr. Ford has campaigned for GOP cancidates, saying that he needs a Congress he can work with to cure the economy, while Democrats have called for congressional strength to put through

The anticipated Democratic landslide comes just two years after Mr. Nixon won for the Republicans one of history's two biggest presidential victories. Although Republicans contended that their candidates were gaining strength across the country, the latest available information showed Democrats still ahead in most of the key races. The AP survey, based on reports from bureaus in all 50 states, late polls and interviews with political strategists for the major parties and candidates, gives the following picture: Senate-The Democrats are likely to gain from five to seven of the 14 GOP seats at stake and stand a good chance of holding all 20 of their own. This could mean 63 to 65 Democrats in the new Senate, compared to the 58-

42 margin they already hold. House—The Democratic gain could be as high as 50 seats and no less than 30 if present trends hold. The Democrats now hold a 248-187 edge.

Governors-The Democrats hold 32 of the 50 statehouses and appear likely to gain from seven to 10 more.

Fulbright Takes Gloomy View of Dangers Facing the World

By Roy Reed FULTON, Mo., Nov. 4 (NYT). Sen. William Fulbright stepped into one of the best-known forums of the English-speaking Unless the Middle East "time bomh" is defused, he said, the World will see "a new war a new oil boycott, and possibly consequences therefrom ranging from another great depression to Armageddon itself."

Westminster College decided that this year's John Findley Green Lecture should commemorate the 100th anniversary, on Nov. 30, of Churchill's birth. Sep. Fulbright, chahman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee since 1959, was chosen to give the lecture.

His speech easily matched Churchill's 1946 Green Lecture in pessimism. The British leader, speaking here on March 5, 1946, told an audience that included President Harry S Truman, that "from Stettin in the Baltic to world." hope, saying that if Britain and the United States joined hands, "the high roads of the future will be clear, not only for us. but for all: not only for our time, but for the century to come."

Sen. Fulbright seemed more resigned. He said:

"History casts no doubt at all on the ability of human beings deal rationally with their problems, but the greatest doubt on their will to do so. The signals of the past are thus clouded and ambiguous, suggesting hope but not confidence in the triumph reason. With nothing to lose in any event, it seems well worth a try.

Sen. Pulbright admitted that his powers of persuasion had been less than be would have liked over the years.

"It is one of the perversities of human nature that people have a far greater capacity for enduring disasters than for preventing them, even when the danger is plain and imminent,"

Warns of Dangers

Today's plainest and most imminent danger is economic collapse and political upheaval, he said. He traced the danger to inflation caused by an imbalance of international payments "caused by the quadrupling of the price of oil since the October war." He said if the trend continued, the credit of consuming countries, rich and poor, would com be exhausted. "giving rise to economic collapse and political upheaval."

Sen. Fulbright said that that could be avoided only by a new austerity for Americans and a settlement of the Middle East

He blamed American "high living" for much of the problem. We cannot blame the oil producers for the irresponsible and rapacious extravagance of our vaunted way of life," he said.

Besides returning to a simple way of living, Americans must accept mandatory government measures including a tax increase greater than that recommended by President Ford, be

Whose Crisis in Vietnam?

That a political crisis is in the making in South Vietnam seems obvious enough, and that President Thieu is the principal target of increasing protest is also patent. What is not clear is whether the crisis stems primarily from the way the Thien government is managing the continuing war with tha North, or from the war itself.

Qalte probably both elements are present. Corruption, and the arbitrary silencing of complaints against it, are aspects of tha Thieu regima that have long stimulated opposition; the rising tide of such opposition, especially among South Vietnamese Roman Catholics, who have a strong leaven of anti-Communism and include many refugees from the North, shows that it is possible to differentiate between resistance to Thieu and submission to the Viet Cong. But the long war brings its own weariness and tends to blend together those who oppose Thieu, the authoritative head of a corrupt administration, and Thieu, the symbol and chief exponent of war to the bitter end. And there are various gradations within both groups. Can Thieu, for example, satisfactorily cleanse his own government and restore civil liberties to a point that would satisfy enough of his opponents to permit his rule to function?

The withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam was based on two assumptions: the first, that North and South Vletnam would honor their agreement to, in effect, conduct their contest along purely political lines; the second, that if the fighting continued, South Vietnam could sustain itself without assistance other than money and material. The first assumption soon vanished; the second is now in doubt.

The fault in those two official American assumptions is not that either of them are immoral in terms of any international ethic. Only those who viewed Hanoi through rosecolored glasses (or those of revolutionary red) took the standpoint that North Vietnam's effort to control the whole region was either necessarily good, or necessarily what tha people wanted. Any error lay in misreading facts, and in drawing conclusions with respect to American obligations and interests that also aren't necessarily so, and this has been chronic in American policy with regard to Vietnam since bafore Dien Bien Phu. The present critical state of affairs in Saigon may require a final determination on the matter in Washington-but real decisions about Vietnam's future, however, will not be made there, but in Vietnam.

Recession-cum-Inflation

With each succeeding week, it has become increasingly clear that the American economy is in a recession, as chairman Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve and President Ford's top economic advisers now concede. The real output of the economy has fallen for three quarters in a row, and is 3 per cent below its rate in the final quarter of 1973; the number of jobless workers bas risen from 4.1 million a year ago to over 5.5 million now. Many private economists fear that this recession could become the longest and most severe of the post-World War II period.

Tha problem of how to deal with the recession is greatly complicated by the persistence of the worst inflation this nation has experienced since the Civil War-and the worst ever in its peacetime history. For the administration drastically to swing fiscal and monetary policy from restraint to stimulus would be to accept the present cruel rate of inflation and even exacerbate it. But for the administration to rely almost entirely on the recession to end the inflation would ba to subject millions of Americans to needlessly prolonged joblessness and hardship.

If a rerun of the Nixon administration's erratic and inflationary stop-go course is to be avoided, President Ford will have to recognize that the current inflation, though kicked off by resulting from huge budget deficits and too rapid an increase in the money supply, has become a cost-push inflation, resulting from the frantic effort of labor and other groups to catch up with skyrocketing prices that have undermined their real income—and the scramble of businesses, farmers and others to pass on (or even anticipate) those cost increases, lest their own profits be undermined. This cost-push inflation is intensified by international factors, especially by the exorbitant price for oil imposed by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and by the worldwide shortage of food and other commodities.

On the wage front in the United States tha administration should be moving to bead off what is becoming a level of wage settlements that could build high inflation into the price structure for years to come, imposing serious strains on the American poilty as well as the economy. In the past three months, unit labor costs have risen at an annual rate of nearly 14 per cent, giving a mean twist to the price-wage-price spiral.

If the sharp uptrend in labor costs is to be brought under control, in both the nonunion and union sectors of the economy, the government should seek to increase the takehome pay of workers by easing their tax burdens. One way to avoid building pay increases far in excess of productivity into the price structure would be to grant lower-income employees a tax credit. The administration should link such a "social compact" tax reduction to a wage guideline that would permit an early return to noninflationary wage settlements. The resulting revenue loss should be offset by a moderate tax increase on upper-income taxpayers (above at least $20,000) and corporations, and by ending oil and gas depletion allowances, eliminating undue tax breaks on foreign oil earnings and other tax reforms.

At the same time, the administration needs to demonstrate that it means business on the price front, focusing its efforts on such inflation-prona areas as oil, construction, medical care, and food. While paying lip service to the need for such "structural" efforts to curb inflation in key sectors. President Ford has actually thrown his weight on the side of inflation by laxity of his approach to energy conservation and by hitting the campaign trail to tell American farmers that he is prepared to limit beef imports that threaten to keep down American livestock

Mr. Ford's politicized economics-his own brand of the old-tima religion that may become known as "Jarryatrics"—will condemn tha nation to needlessly protracted inflation and recession, and will deepen the public's lack of confidence in the economic capability and integrity of this administration.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Oil Consumer Unity

suming countries, to assure "secure oil suppiles on reasonable and equitable terms," is now a virtual certainty. With formal U.S. notification of acceptance deposited in Brussels, the extraordinary oil-sharing pact negotiated in the seven months following the Washington Energy Conference of last February will come into effect.

Of the 12 nations participating in tha negotiations, only Norway has withdrawn, and France, which stayed out from the start, has elected to remain outside. A new international energy agency, under the aegis of the 24-nation OECD, is to begin to function this month on a provisional basis, pending formal parliamentary ratification in the countries where this is needed. Up to six other OECD countries have shown interest in joining the 11 original participants.

What this means is that countries that import 80 per cent of the world's oil are uniting behind a program that could somewhat redress the balance between consuming and producing countries. > Through the new energy agency, the oilconsuming nations now intend to undertake a long-term program of energy conservation and accelerated development of alternativa energy supplies. The more rapidly they can reduce dependence on the oil-exporting nations, the sooner they will have a chance to break the extortionate price level, quadrupled in a year, that the oil-producers' cartel bas imposed on the world economy.

Parallel action by all the oil-consuming nations could make stringent conservation politically easier for each of them. American leadership is the key. WASHINGTON-Repeated rumors of CIA plots to "destabilize" the Portuguese regime prompt the question: What did Mr. Kissinger mean when he said that "I don't see why we need to stand by and watch a country go Communist due to the irresponsibility of its own people"?

Mr. Rissinger made the remark, according to documents which became available recently, during the "40 Committee" discussions in 1970 on secret operations in Chile. It is difficult to credit the rumors from Lisbon, if only be-cause informed opinion in Washington agrees that it would be the height of folly to prompt a coup in Portugal. But Kissinger has other ways of pursuing his objective, and some politicians in the NATO countries are worried that he may go too far. They believe that he is trying to use NATO to manipulate the internal politics of the member

View of NATO

The Communists now in the Portuguese government, and Com-munist leaders in Daly, say that countries out of NATO. To advocate departure from NATO would be to give the impression of moving toward the Soviet camp, and to lose public support. NATO membership is seen by some people as a guarantee of democracy and thus, perversely, as the condition under which their country could afford to have Communists in the government.

Therefore Washington, by countenancing Portugal's membership of NATO, may appear to be signaling Rome that Italy too could stay in NATO as well as have Communists in the coalition. This is certainly not the message Washington wants to convey, and it has engaged in some elaborate behind-the-scenes maneuvering to get its point

Now the meeting of the NATO defense ministers comprising the nuclear planning group, which was due to be held in Rome this week, has been postponed. One reason Washington gave was that it could not disclose highly secret information to a government-whose Communist members or officials might pass it back to

It was serving notice also on Italian politicians who favor a coalition with Communists that, ultimately, they might have to choose between such a coalition and NATO membership.

Portugal's request for economic aid during President Gomes's recent visit to Washington also elicited a polite lecture from Kissinger about the difficulty of getting congressional aid appropristions these days, especially for countries with Communist connections. Portuguese officials argue, as politely, that economic aid would avert the impending massive unemployment, and the concomitant political unrest which could push the country further to the left. By delaying the aid, and by using it as a political lever, Washington may be hastening the very result it wants to prevent.

Any basis for predicting the likely course of events has now been swept away by the new electoral law which increased the electorate from two millon to five. Some public opinion polls taken privately in Portugal indicated a Communist vote of between 15 and 20 per cent, but that was before the new law. The March election will produce only a constituent assembly, not a new government, and therefore the chances are that the Communists will stay on in the coalition.

engage, from the inside, in all the power games and intrigues which the established political parties have practiced in seeking to dominate the political life of their countries.

Non-Communists and anti-Communists in the West obvi-ously have a political as well as an ideological stake in preventing such Communist domination. But unless they recognize the change which has come over Western Communist parties, and adjust their own tactics accordingly, they are more likely to advance the Communists' objectives than to thwart them. For the United States, and for NATO, this means evolving a new formula which would sllow NATO membership of countries with Communists in their governments rather than threatening to isolate or to cast out such countries.

The Soviet Union can afford to invade its allies. The United States cannot, and will not, and. wider support. And they want to of dealing with the problem.

From London:

'Beachcomber' is an exponent of the kind of English zany humor some take to greedily ...

I ONDON.—The publication over the present rich selection the weekend of a handsome selection of the works of John Andrieu Bingham Michael Morton was one of the rare occasions recently when the beleaguered British were presented with a joily dossier of un-deflated stable achievement. Under the pseudonym of Beachcomber," J.B. Morton has been writing a humorous column in the Daily Express five fimes a week for the past 50 years. This is enough to bring the hot spot of a sense of betrayal to the cheeks of columnists who secretly hope for a career graduating in old age toward the Encyclopaedia Britannica and a deadline every seven years.

"Beachcomber" is 81 and still writes (but recently only once a week) a column he began in 1924. Last Saturday he was still at it, advising the country to have elections every month on the grounds that it would keep the politicians so busy they would not have time to get into mischief; reporting on an incident between a couple of crazy "Zombririan" ballet dancers and, using his brand of what he calls "horse non-sense," he advised a distracted mother whose son insisted on wearing his socks over his shoes. "Beachcomber" told her to make her son wear shoes over the socks over his shoes, and if necessary shoes and socks over the shoes over his socks and con-tinue the treatment until the lad was brought to his senses or Wodehouse has said that every time he hears the name "Beachcomber," "I fling my hat in the air and give three rousing cheers. Sometimes causes a good deal of comment from passers-by." Evelyn Waugh considered that he showed "the greatest comic fertility of any Englishman."

All the modern younger humorists have paid him homage Michael Frayn, who in the 1960s wrote the Guardian's best satirical column, edited a selection of "Beachcomber's" work 11 years ago; Spike Milligan of the famous 1950s Goon Show ("The Wireless Show with the Brandy Base") paid him homage, and now Richard Ingrams, the editor of Britain's satirical magazine, Private Eye, has brought out

Even without counting South Asia, Dr. Handler says, the rich countries will have to divert immense amounts of capital to the less developed world if they want to avert economic disaster, dangerous resentments and growing terrorism. That means cutting back their own developmentperhaps even an absolute decline in per capita income in the developed countries.

It is difficult to suggest the scope of Dr. Handler's vision in a newspaper column. His discussion of the food problem is only one part of a large canvas. He sees famine, climatic changes, infistion and environmental damage as warning signals of basic dislocation in man's relationship to earth. Essentially he is pleading with those who have money and power, especially Americans, to shandon the illusion that they can go on as they have, multiplying numbers and appetites.

The dream of perpetual growth and prosperity for a lucky few on earth is exceptionally difficult to dispel. ## Study Asks Revenue Sharing's Continuation

By Ernest Holsendolph

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (NYT). —A two-year study of federal revenue sharing has concluded that despite some shortcomings. the $30.2-billion program should be renewed as soon as possible, and on a long-term basis.

Passed in 1972 as the cornerstone of President Richard Nixon's new federalism, the program has been returning money to 39,000 state and local governments. The five-year plan is just past the halfway point and has resulted in the disbursement of more than $15 billion, officials said here.

The Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, com-posed of private citizens, members of Congress and representatives of local and state governments, has concluded that Congress should renew the plan, due to expire Dec. 31, 1976.

The commission, established in 1959 by Congress to monitor national governmental operations was an early supporter of revenue sharing. Its chairman is Robert Merriam, a Chicago husiness execu-tive. Among its 23 members are Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, Sen. Charles Percy, R-III., and Caspar Weinherger, the Secretary of Health, Education and Wel-

The commission supported renewal of the program despite strong contentions that it has failed to attract a significant amount of citizen participation in the design of new local programs and that there are insufficient safeguards against racial and sexual discrimination in the use of the funds.

On the positive side, the commission said, revenue sharing has served to help equalize rich and poor states, has given more to needy central cities than to wellto-do suburbs and has allowed states and local communities to enjoy a healthy and wide discretion in use of the money. There was some division of oninion as to what form revenue sharing should take in the future. Local officials, who are recipients of revenue sharing, supported the majority opinion that funds should come from a permanent trust rather than in five-year appropriations.

Furthermore, they believed that the funds should be tied to a constant percentage of the federal nersonal income tax base. This approach, they asserted, would allow local governments and spending agencies to plan on the basis of known income sources.

Sen. Muskie said he preferred the flexibility of periodic appropriations.

Representatives of civil rights organizations, minority groups and Sen. Muskie have criticized the Office of Revenue Sharing for not being more active in enforcement of the anti-discrimination provisions of the program.

The commission found that out of 41 civil rights complaints handled by the office between October, 1972, and June, 1974, 18 had heen resolved, 22 were in the process of negotiation and one was in court.

Director's View

Graham Watt, director of the office, said that he did not favor a much larger compliance program in connection with revenue sharing, preferring instead to work through local and state agencles that deal with minority

MOSCOW (NYT). - Krokodil. the Soviet satirical weekly magazine, appeared recently with a cover cartoon showing a yellowfaced, green-eyed smoker, head on the table like e suicide victim, hand clutching a pack of cigarettes with one protruding from the pack like the barrel of a pistol.

In a striking attack on smoking in this country, where antismoking advertisements are infrequent, Krokodil devoted an entire 16-page issue to the question, It disclosed that smoking had grown four times as rapidly as the population since 1970.

Domestic cigarette production this year, according to Vladimir Kholostiv, chief of the tobacco administration, will hit 373 bil-lion—enough for everyone over 14 to smoke 100 packs a year even without sizable imports from Bulgaria, Cuba, Yugoslavia and the United States, By comparison, the average American aged 18 or over smokes over 200 packs a year.

The rise in Soviet cigarette production since 1970 has been 15.5 per cent, while the rise in population has been just under 4 per cent

The Thing to Do

The Krokodii article confirmed what almost any Soviet citizen will tell a visitor—that smoking is increasingly fashionable and popular especially among women and young peo-ple, despite the introduction of more expensive brands.

The rough-cut Primas, cheapest of all, still sell for 14 kopecks (18 cents) a pack. The more popular Stolichnye or Rossiskiye cost 40 kopecks (52 cents) and some people will pay 80 kopecks (78 cents) for Yava longs, Next weekend, a conference of OAS delegates from 23 countries will meet in Quito, Ecuador, and the required two-thirds majority is expected to vote to leave each member country free to choose Cuba. For the first time in the history of the Cuban controversy, the United States, so far as Latin diplomate in three countries have been able to determine, has no clear position.

Isolating Cubs from Latin America failed to bring down Premier Castro's government or force it to change course, as three U.S. presidents apparently hoped it would. In the view of Latin American leaders, it halted the spread of Cuban-style revolution only when the United States was willing to intervene in Latin American internal affairs. For these leaders the policy had three other effects that were predicted by public figures as it was taking shape in 1961 and 1962.

Mr. Frondizi made his predic-tions in letters to and conversations with Mr. Kennedy. The late Francisco Santiago Dantes of Brazil, then foreign minister, made his publicly in speeches.

First, Cuba, despite Mr. Castro's vaunted nationalism, became a Soviet satellite.

Then, the inter-American system of defense alliances and the OAS, which had been built on the principle of self-determination for all member states, was strained to the breaking point.

Latin American leaders asserted that the precedent for inter-vention set by the decision in 1962 to expel Cubs from the in-ter-American system opened the way for the U.S. invasion of the linican Republic in 1965 and for CIA support for the opposi-tion to the late president Salvador Allende of Chile.

"The U.S. became the great judge of the fitness of governments in the hemisphere, said Sen. Julio Turbay, who argued with the United States in favor of diplomatic action against Cuba when he was Colombian foreign minister in 1961. That was not what we had intended."

Increasingly Radicalized Finally, Latin demestic politics

became increasingly radicalized under the pressure to line up on the U.S. side in the cold war. Stnmbling democratic governments that had favored Cuba's right to go its own way were ousted by military coups in Argentina in 1962, in Brazil in 1964 and in Chile last year. But now even Mr. Castro has been showing signs that he wants an end not only to Cuba's isolation from Latin America but from the United States as well.

The top of the wall around Cubs was completed in 1964, after the coup in Brazil, when Venezuela presented evidence to the OAS of Cuba's clandestine landing of arms in Venezuela.

Under the collective defense treaty reached at RIo de Janeiro, with a two-thirds rule in effect, the OAS membership voted to make the break in diplomatic and trade relations with Cuba man-

A Problem for U.S., Russians Facilities Limited in

Remote Vladivostok

By Peter Osnos

MOSCOW, Nov. 4 (WP). President Ford's meeting later this month with Soviet party leader Leonid Breshney in an isolated compound near Vladi-vostok its posing some serious logistics problems for Soviet and American planners.

In discussions over the last few days with U.S. diplomats, the Russians have made it clear that facilities at the site, about 50 minutes by helicopter from Vladi-vostok, are very limited.

As a result, the Russians said that only about 60 non-Soviet journalists, including technicians and supervisory personnel, will be accredited for the visit. Apparently, a similar number of Soviet journalists will be on hand. Ender Negotiations

What is not clear yet is whether the proposed 60 figure includes all foreign reporters, Eastern Europeans, Western Europeans and others, or just Americans, That point, an American source said today, is under negotiation.

In any event, the Soviet decision to restrict coverage means that the majority of reporters traveling with Mr. Ford to Japan and South Kores before he meets with Mr. Brezhnev will be unable to cover the Viadivostok talks.

The two previous summit conferences in the Soviet, Union were accessible to all journalists and the events attracted hundreds from the United States and elsewhere. Vladivostok for years has been closed to foreigners and the initiel amouncement of the summit there raised the possibility that those restrictions had been lifted. They were not.

SAIGON, Nov. 4 (NYT),-The opposition to President Nguyen Van Thieu, which has just begun to take to the streets, did not materialize overnight. It has been building during the 21 months of distilusion, economic decline and war that have followed the signing of the Paris peace agree-

Although Mr. Thieu is now being attacked for the corruption and repressiveness of his regime he is, at bottom, being blamed for presiding over non-Commu-nist South Vietnam at a time when things have gone from bad to very bad.

And, as they look to the future, many informed Vietnamese have concluded, rightly or wrongly, that in Saigon will not much longer be able to afford Mr. Thieu's poltey of uncompromising military confrontation with the Commu-

Over the years, many South Vietnamese, perhaps most, have come to believe that the United States is the arbiter of their destiny. When they perceive that their small nation is no longer the nivet of Washington's foreign policy, when they see the American Congress halve South Vietnam's military appropriation, when they hear Mr. Thieu denousce his closest ally for betrayal of a supposed pledge of support—they draw their own conclusions.

"Now the United States and others are talking about national reconciliation and concord," observed an anti-Communist parish priest who led thousands of Roman Catholics out of North Vletnam 20 years ago. "These are the words of the times."

Again, seen from here, the Mixon resignation was a stunning blow to Mr. Thieu. It did not matter that, objectively, President Ford was probably better able to help Saigon with what it needed most-money. Richard Nixon had stood by Mr. Thien for five years; their destines were seen to be intertwined.

To be sure, the Americans have not abandoned Mr. Thieu and there is no evidence that they have been manipulating his opponents. On the contrary, Am-bassador Graham Martin has pledged firm support to the gov-ernment that the South Vict-namese people "have freely chosen in their struggle against the cruel North Vietnamese aggres-

In urging that the Defense Department "initiate an accelersted program to provide nuclear power plants for its bases worldwide," Dr. Agnew said the Pentagon "should pursue a policy of giving up its dependence on petroleum products whenever possible, as soon as possible." His proposal, as he noted in his lecture, has drawn an initial negative reaction from Defense Department officials, who have raised the objection of the high cost of constructing nuclear power plants. As a solution to the cost problem; Dr. Agnew suggested that the Defense Department could "buy in" by providing private firms building the plants with nuclear fuel obtained from a stockpile of obsolete atomic weapons. This proposal for "min-ing the stockpile," in turn, is related to a program long pushed by the Atomic Energy Commission's weapons laboratories to "modernize the stockpile" by production of a new generation of more accurate, less powerful atomic weapons for battlefield

BRUSSELS (IHT) - David Bicks. 45. British designer, is selfadmittedly a man of constant contradiction: He laments the sontinuing process of internationalization in the applied arts, yet he jets around the world building an international network of internationally recognized interior

"We can't beat the trend," said Mr. Hicks, "we have to join. The mass media are bringing American culture to Europe, Indian culture to the United States, Euro-American trends to the Far East, What we can do is to try to keep this new international oulture developing in a graceful, tasteful manner."

Mr. Hicks, in Brussels for the epening of his Belgian branch in the Rue de la Concorde, just off fashionable Avenue Louise, designs for the high and the mighty, with addresses such as Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle or 1800 Pennsylvania Avenue. But, contradicting the records again, he maintains that he works primarily for the regular fellow, for John Doe, and Monsieur Dubois.

"Look," said Nicole Cooremans. one of Mr. Hicks's three Belgian associates (the others are Claude Nivelles and Willy De Smet). we'll provide interior design for your Renaissance castle-if you have one—or we'll sell you a Christmas present for 300 Belgian francs and upwards. The price of the product may differ but they have one thing in common: taste. by contemporary standards." Mr. Hicks, a former student at the London Council School of Arts and Crafts, graduated in stage design. He didn't quote a fellow countryman of his that "all the world is a stage" but the answer was in the air.

'Good Table' "Interior design is the art of ccomplishing a maximum with a minimum," he said. The important thing, as I see it." Mr. Hicks continued, "Is to try to bring good taste to everyone, regardless of race, creed and income bracket." Mr. Hicks, at times, sounds like a sophisticated revival preacher.

"Look," said Mrs. Cooremans. bolding a piece of wallpaper behind a sofa. "See how the design matches, how the colors harmo-

"We have been overrun on a worldwide scale with American influence," Mr. Hicks said. "It used to be, remember, that you could wake up in a hotel room, look at the walls, the ceiling and the floor and know instantly that this is France, Germany, England... I and my associates would like to return progressively to that

"How can nrdinary wage earners afford your services?" Mr. Hicks was asked "We try to make sure they can," said Mr. Hicks, "It is aren't exclusively in the carriage trade."

Mr. Hicks pointed at his whiteon-blue tie. "Look," he said, "at the geometric design. You can make out an H for H in Hicks and an 'x' for 'icks'. We design ties for people with names ranging from A to Z."

"Do you plan to get into fashion design?" he was asked. "Eventually," said Mr. Hicks. "The Japanese want to dress like Europeans, but their legs are too short. The Europeans want kimonos but their backs are too broad. I'd like to work that equation out."

Mr. Hicks is the author of five books on easy living and interior design. One of the books is on bathrooms, a badly neglected issue in his opinion.

Hicks Bathroom A Ricks-designed bathroom is likely to have wall-to-wall carpeting, pictures on the walls, a TV set and telephone. The tub, very likely, will be placed in the middle of the room, for easy access. "You started out as a stage designer. Have you done any scenography?"

"L'c," Mr. Hicks said, "but I'd love to set the stage for a Wagner opera at the Metropolitan, I'm a Wagner fan (married to a half-German) and I'd do it more or less for Ficks if they asked me." "You spend a lot of time in the air," a journalist said. "How do you find time to work between London, New York, Tokyo and Brussels?"

"I spend two or three months each year, relaxing in the South of France," Mr. Hicks said, "Then I have my farm (1,600 acres) near Oxford. There I manage to find time for thinking and doodling. I am basically a farmer at heart."

WAVERLEY ROOT: Investigations Into Chicory and Endive WHAT is chicory? Or, more pertinently, which plant of the family Cichortum is chicory and which is endive? A question already raised in this paper on May 14, in an article on the other member of this pair, endive. There are two contenders, Cichorium endinia and Cichorium intybus, and as the first carries the very word endive in its stomach, that ought to end the

Yes, but what is intybus? Y and I are the same letters: intybus-intibus. Vowels are often little more than an invitation to take a breath before attacking consonants; for intibus one could just as well write entibus. T and D are first cousins, replacing one another in different languages; entibus-endibus. As we all know, B and V are interchangeable in Indo-European languages; endibus-endibus. So we end up with endivia versus endivus, shamelessly abandoned by scientific terminology.

Popular usage is even worse. Cichorium endivia is endive and Cichorium intubus is chicory in England and Germany, but in France it is just the opposite. Popular usage in the United States usually follows the French example, but scientific usage that of England and Germany.

The Belgians, the world's lead-ing producers of both, should be able to tell one from another, but when we turn in that direction for enlightenment, we run into still another term, chicon, a word which intrigues etymologists. They shun the simple explanation that this is simple a shortened form of the word chicory, and derive it from chicot, stump, because it usually appears on the market with a piece of its stump on the bottom. So does cabbage, but it is not included under the name chicon-because, the etymologists continue, chicorée (chicory) sttracted chicot to itself, but chou (cabbage) did not. So is chicon chicory? Perhaps—which still doesn't tell us what chicory is.

Another Country

Chicon means the same thing in northern France as in Bel-gium, whatever it is, but in central and southeastern France it means Romaine lettuce: another country heard from! This meaning seems to have spilled over into Italy, for I have heard the word used with the same meaning in Rome, where I suppose it ought to be spelled cicon; but I do not find it in any Italian dictionary, so the Roman word must be local or slang. Official Italian avoids the issue by referring to insalata belga, Belgian salad. This, however, is accepted generally as a synonym for endivia, which, as in France, C. endivia is cicoria.

What we need is a sort of World Court to determine which country has a right to impose its own definition on the others. but in its absence I propose to follow the example of Belgium, which has a maternal interest in both plants. Getting rid of chicon, which seems to change meaning every few miles, we will discover that in Belgium—well, in. most parts of Belgium-endine is C. endivia and chicores is C. intybus-as in England and Germany, Getting out of the dictionary and onto the table, this means that chicary is the tightly wrapped spindle-shaped bundle of salad greens that looks something like a small, shiny car of sweet corn with its husk on, but chicory is all husks and no cob, and the "husks"-the leaves-are tender and tasty.

From the Greek

The word chicory is less of a wilderness. It comes from the Greek kichoreia or kicheiron, influenced on its way into English by the French chicorée, which itself was so directly modeled upon the Italian cicoria that when it first entered French in the 13th century it was pr nounced, in imitation of Italian, as if it were spelled tchicoria, and even today recalls its ancestry by sounding as if it were spelled tchicoree. In English, chicory has given rise to succory, which Webster thinks was influ-enced by the Dutch suker, sugar; this seems unreasonable since one of the most striking characteristics of chloory is bitterness. The Random House dictionary offers a more plausible explana tion: succory harks back to the Latin succus, juice; chicory root

Whatever its origin, succory is a folksy word and it is used with folksy imprecision. It can stand indiscriminately for any plant of the genus Cichorium (and thus for both chicory and endive), and even for some for-eign to it. Blue succory is the southern European Catananche coerula; gum succery is a Euro-pean weed, Chondilla juncea, or, indeed, any other plant of that genus; and lamb succory is Arno-seris minima, a small European herb also called dwarf nipple-delion (chicory foliage does re-semble that of the dandelion, but its flowers are blue); coffeeweed (chicary is probably the most common coffee substitute or adulterant); blueweed; blue sailors; and ragged sailors because its petals are of meven length, giving it a tattered look. The last seems to be unknown to the dictionaries. Webster lists ragged sailor, but defines it as meaning the cornflower or the prince's feather.

In French, Alexandre Dumas calls chicorée the pissenlit (pis-sabed), but he is alone in this definition. Pissenlit is ordinarily understood to mean the dandelion, with which chicory does indeed share the diuretic effect promised by the name. French further complicates matters by calling one of the principal varieties of Cichorium chicorés sauvage, literally wild chicory, but it doesn't necessarily mean that the plant grows wild. It may or it may not, so that you can have wild wild chicory or cultivated wild chicory, though for the sake of precision the latter is some-times described as chicorée saunnroved chicory." It might be natural to assume that chicorée des jardins, garden chicory, would mean cultivated chicory, especially as it is also called chicorée cultivée. But this would be an error too. Once again, it identifies a variety, which may turn up either wild or cultivated.

The cultivation of both chicory and endive is almost a European monopoly, particularly of Belgium, France, Germany and the Netherlands. In America, C. in-tybus is comparatively rare, except wild. And if you see it on a menu at all, it will probably be called endire. It reached America from the 11d World as a weed only towards the end of the 19th century but then spread quickly along the East Coast from Canada to Florida, and Dushed westward as far as the Plains, which were apparently not propitions to it. From this point on, it is preas only spottily until the Pacific Coast is reached, where it again flourishes. It grows especially in the fields, along roadsides and on fallow land so abundantly that it is usually thought of in the United States as a pest, an opinion shared in Australia, where cu vated chicory was imported : escaped from the gardens to ov run the countryside.

Pleasant Way

If its presence on any 1'. you happen to own annoys a pleasant way to get rid o is to eat it. #### CNA Backs New Loews Offer

CNA Pinancial Corp.'s board has voted unanimously to recommend that stockholders accept a revised tender offer by Loews Corp. at redoced prices. Under the new terms, Loews would pay $5 a share for CNA common compared with the $6 proposed earlier, and $6.75 for the preferred instead of the previous $8. The offer continues to be conditioned on the tender of at least 20 million shares, which would give Loews control of CNA. The revised version also obligates Loews to purchase directly from CNA $25 million of a new series of CNA convertible preferred bearing an 80-cent annual dividend rate at the same $6.75 price. CNA's outstanding series "A" preferred pays a $1.10 dividend annually.

British Auto Exports Rise

British auto industry exports in September rose to £141.1 million from £109.3 million a year earlier, while imports rose to £648 million from $55.7 million, giving the country a £76.3million trade surplus in this sector. Although September's auto industry trade surplus was 41 per cent above the year earlier figure of £54.2 million, the surplus was the smallest for any month since February. The Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders, which issues the statistics, said auto industry exports in the first nine months of this year rose to £1.343 billion, up 15 per cent from £1.171 billion a year earlier. Imports totaled £580.7 million, up only 1 per cent from £576.7 million in the first nine months of 1973. Britain's auto industry surplus through September rose to £762.1 million, up 28 per cent from £594.4 million in the first nine months of 1973. The industry is expected to have a record trade surplus of about £1 billion for all 1974. Nearly all the increase in exports has been due to higher costs.

Teijin Expects New Profit Decline

Teijin Ltd. says its net profit is likely to drop to 3 billion yen ($6 million) in the half year ending March 31 from 6.5 billion yen in the preceding term. Vice-president Tomoo Tilcusue told a press conference the company will cut its dividend for the period to 3.50 yer from 3.75. He said the company, which lest Friday reported a 19-per-ceot fall in net profit for the six months to end September, i. cutting production of nylon by 40 per cent and polyester by 20 per cent. There will be further cutbacks if the textile market remains depressed, he said.

"Today I am directing the Secretary of the Interior to increase the acreage leased on the outer continental shelf to 10 million acres beginning in 1975, more than tripling what had originally been planned."

Leases Ordered Only last August, Mr. Carter sent a memo on behalf of Under Secretary John Whitaker, ordering preparations for "10 million acres leased in 1975, not just 10 million acres offered." But when Mr. Morton was asked, last Sept. 16, if the policy was still to lease 10 million acres a year for three or four years, overall trade balance. goal is to find, not lease acres. So we will try to get into the best areas first."

What happened between the hold determination of mid-Avenst and the sudden cantion of mid-September? One thing was the publication of a report by the National Petroleum Council, an industry-government advisory group. That report said there would not be enough drilling rigs, tu-bular steel, or skilled manpower to explore and develop five million acres a year, let alone 10. Asked if there are enough drilling rigs for 10 million new offshore acres in 1975, Mr. Carter said, "I don't think it's possible to say with certainty that rigs will be available or not available. To hold back leasing now does not get on with the job."

The goal of lessing now clearly has changed from an expectation of rapid development of untouched "frontier areas" off the Atlantic, Pacific and Alaskan coasts, to the hope that they can, at least, be explored.

Early new production now seems more likely in the Gulf of Mexico, already well explored and highly developed. "The goals for the Gulf of-Mexico are realistic," Mr. Morton

In the latest interview. Mr. Morton was more explicit: "If we decide to go with the frontier areas, it should be in a way that we find out where the ofl is, and where it is not. And in the meantime, I think we ought to continue in the known structure areas and in the Gulf of Mexico . . . we should move to what the marketplace can absorb."

revisions will allow mutual funds to provide more informative advertisements which will also emphasize the importance of a fund's prospectus. The SEC issued additional proposed rule changes which would allow mutual funds to offer so-called open seasons for sales which would allow pur-chases of mutual fund shares at reduced prices to persons who have held shares for a specified period of time. The SEC said it would consider applications for exemption from present rules to permit sales price reductions to persons who have previously purchased from the same retailer another investment or an insurance policy, distributed by the same underwriter. The agency said it would ask the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD) to adopt a rule eliminating restrictions that prevent dealers from engag-

ARE you doing anything now," an affable fellow-Texan once asked me with the friendliest interest, "or are you still just writing?" Donald Barthelme grew up down there too and no doubt learned to field that query in the land where the bluebonnets grow. i wonder how he feels when the same question turns up now in reviews of his work; how he felt for instance. when one of his profoundest funniest and most personal stories. "Daumier"—it happens to take piace on a Texas prairie was generally dismissed by reviewers of his last book. "Just writing" is the main suspicton lodged against him. I sometimes mutter it myself, when I can't quite see what he's up to.

"Guilty Pleasures" is Barthelme's easiest book and a handy introduction for those who may have resisted or dodged him. It's rather oddly announced as his first book of nonfliction, but I think I see what's meant. Parody fable, collage and the Homeric catalogue of cultural detritus are the weaponry of Barthelme's fictions: they are deployed there in dizzying combinations and substituted for one another without warning. Here the categories are distinct and the occasions clearly defined. Barthelme, over-modestly in some cases, seems to regard these pieces as his mere journalism.

His Mrs. Miniver Rose in this line of work is "The Teachings of Don B. A Yankee Way of Knowledge," in which he amiably and gently deep-sizes the works of Carlos Castaneda. "L'Lapse" is an ingenious double parody of twosolemnities—a course in film criticism and an Antonioni screen-play, complete with such camera angles as "Medium shot of tree branches afflicted with Memling's

But some-times he deserves his misfortune: There is often some way in which he could have protected himself against the bad break. Consider, for example the sad gramed deal, played last week in a sectional tournament in Mexico.

The bidding began quietly with three bids at the one-level. but North then jumped to game, showing four-card spade support and the values for an opening hid. With considerable reserve strength, South headed for slam, nibbling at seven when North showed two sees. Rama vs. 49ers

SAN FRANCISCO; Nov. 4 (AF). Two out of three streaks will be working against the San Francisco agers in their game against the Los Angeles Rams tonight. Coach Dick Nolan's team has lost five straight games since opening the season with two victories, and the Rams have beaten the 49ers in the last eight regular-season meetings between the National Football Conference But the 49ers will have the home field advantage, and all seven previous NFL Monday-night games this year have been won by the home team.

Two young quarterbacks, Tom Owen of the 49ers and James Harris of the Rams, will be start-ing. Owen, a rookie from Wichita State, made his first NFL start last week and the team had its best offensive game, with 372 yards in a 35-24 loss to Oakland.

Harris made his first start for the Rams two weeks ago and had a sensational day in a 37-14 victory over the 49ers. In his second start, Harris completed only six passes in a 20-13 victory over the New York Jets. Tha Rams are now 5-2.

How a Broken Promise Hurt Aaron in Atlanta

By Dave Anderson

Henry Aaron is going home to Milwankee where his heart is. It isn't in Atlanta anymore.

"You live and you learn," he was saying when the Milwaukee Brewers were negotiating to obtain him from the Atlanta Braves for Dave May and a minorleague player to be named later. "Some people I thought were friends, but I learned different. 1 can't put my finger on one person. More the whole organiza-

He meant the Braves' organization that had promised him a prominent role in the front of-rice.

"I always thought I'd be involved in making decisions on players and working in player development, things like that, baseball things," said the man with 733 home runs. "But when we hegan having meetings late in the season, they started talking about how they wanted me to work with the LaSalle Corporation as an ambassador for their sporting-goods division."

Bill Bartholomay, the Braves' chairman, and Dan Donohue, the club president, are connected with the LaSalle Corp., a Chicago-based conglomerate that owns the Braves.

"They just wanted me to shake hands for the LaSalle people," Aaron continued. "I didn't want to shake hands for them. I shake hands for Magnayox, and they pay a lot more money."

He is completing the first year of a five-year contract with Magnavox for a total compensation of $1 million.

"The Braves offered me $30.-000," said Aaron, who was earning $175,000 annually as a player. "Stan Musial made more than that 10 years ago when he re-

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (NYT) .- in the front office. Stan Musical made $39,000 in that job then. I figured I'd get a lot more than that now." And so the Braves broke Henry Aeron's heart by insulting both his intelligence and his income. "That's when I began to see things," he said. "Things that I hadn't qui noticed before." Ended in Atlanta

His romance with the Braves began and flourished in Milwankee, but it ended in Atlanta. He remembered how the Braves had used him when he was ap-proaching Babe Ruth's record of 714 home runs. Bartholomay and the Braves' general manager. Eddie Robinson, had persuaded him not to play in the opening series in Cincinnati last April so that he might tie and break the record in Atlanta, where the Braves sell tickets. In his innocence and trust, he agreed. But then Commissioner Bowie Kuhn suggested strongly that Aaron be in the opening-day lineup. Bartholomay and Robin-oon surrendered, but Aaron had to take the flak. Not that it subotaged his competitive integrity. On his first swing, he hit his 714th home run.

After the Braves' manager, Eddie Mathews, declined to write Aaron's name in the lineup for the second game in Cincinnati the commissioner ordered that he play in the third game. More flak. But the next night on his first swing in Atlanta, the issue ended when Aaron hit his 715th home run.

Throughout the controversy, Mathews was the manager in the middle. Quietly, he kept taking the rap for Bartholomay and Robinson, the true conspirators. His thanks was an abrupt discharge by Bartholomay and Rohinson at the all-star gama hreak. That's when Aaron realized that his pal Mathews, his teammate in Milwaukee and Atlanta for so many years, had been stabled. He also recalled that he had been ignored as a candidate to be Mathew's suc-CCSSOT

"I deserved to be asked if I wanted the job," Aaron said.
"I think they owe that to me." But by then, Bartholomny and Robinson had chosen Clyde King

And then when the front-office situation developed, I knew I'd played my last game for the Braves but I didn't want to retire in that atmosphere. "I'll be 41 in February," he said, 'but I still feel I can swing the bat. I'm not on crutches out there."

He'll be the Milwaukee Brewers' designated hitter at the same $175,000 salary he had in Atlanta and he has been promised a prominent front-office role when he retires.

A Look at the College Bowl-Game Candidates

By Gordon S. White Jr.

NEW YORK, NOV. 4 (NYT).-If the bowls picked their teams today, a fair guess for the Orange and Sugar Bowls might be Alabama against Notre Dame in one and Florida against Penn State in the other.

But there are two weeks remaining before the announcements.

If the Heisman Trophy vote took place today, Archie Griffin would probably win hands down, The three remaining games on Ohio State's schedule should do nothing to prevent the Buckeyes star back from becoming the first junior to win the trophy since player-of-the-year award in 1963.

After Ohio State set a Buckeye record of 644 yards on offense, and Griffin picked up 144 of it on the ground, in Ohio State's 49-7 victory over Illinois, coach Woody Hayes said, "There's nobody close to Griffin for the Heisman Trophy." Griffin became the first major college player to pick up 100 or more yards in each of 18 consecutive games. Bob Blackman, the Illini coach, said, "I don't think there's ever been a team with so many offensive weapons." Unless the undefeated and untied Michigan Wolverines can stop the Buckeyes on Nov. 23, it seems certain that undefeated and untied Ohio State will go to the Rose Bowl.

Auburn's Defeat

A hig surprise changed the thinking in the other major bowl situations as Florida handed Auburn its first defeat of the year, 25-14. Penn State looked like its usual bowl teams with opportunistic defense that beat Maryland, the Lions' most diffigult foe to date, 24-17.

The Getors and the Nittany Lions have lost a game each and should become the highest ranked teams other than Alabama and Notre Dame to be eligible for the Orange and Sugar Bowls. Each of these bowls has extended an offer of over half a million dol-lars to both the Irish and Crimson Tide for a rematch of their Sugar Bowl game last winter,

But the Irish didn't perform much like a bowl team as they fought hard to get away with a 14-S victory over Navy. Nevertheless, Tom Clements, Notre Dame's quarterback, set an Irish career total offense record of 4,155 yards. His 129 yards against Navy enabled him to break the old mark of 4,111 yards set by George Gipp, one of the most famous of Knute Rockne's backs in the 1920s.

Alabama remained undefeated and united with a 35-0 victory over Mississippi State. It may who dictates the bowl site if his team again meets Notre Dame, because the Crimson Tide has the perfect record while Notre Dame has a loss.

State, 23-10, and is not going to a bowl this winter, and Yale, which beat Dartmouth, 14-9, and is probably never going to go to a bowl, are the only other remaining undefeated and untied major teams.

Oklahoma extended its winning streak to 16 games, even though there was an upset within the Sooners' game, Iowa State became the first team this season to outgain Oklahoma-335 to 327

More important than his half of the $50,000 prize is that, in 1975, McLendon will not need to endure the ordeal of having to qualify every Monday for each tournament he enters. This is a giant step for a player who has won only $9,474 this year; this season he entered 27 tournaments, missed the cut in 11 and failed to qualify for three. Be-fore yesterday, his best finish in 1974 was a tie for 15th in the B.C. Open.

Green and McLendon won by a stroke ahead of two teams tied for second place—Sam Snead and his nephew, J.C. Snead, and Bert Yancey-Ed Sneed.

Maureen Dean-'I'm Not Dealing With It Very Well'

By Marlene Cimons

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—It takes about one hour to drive from Washington to Ft. Holabird in Baltimore. It is a trip that Maureen Dean has made many times in the past two months to sit in a tiny, barren room with her husband.

It is there that former White House counsel John Wesley Dean 3d, 35, a witness for the government in the Watergate coverup trial. is serving a one-to-four-year prison term for obstruction of justice. They exchange small talk-about books, about their new house in Los Angeles. They rarely, if ever, discuss Watergate. They are never alone. A U.S. marshal always witnesses their meetings.

"I had become terribly dependent on John," Mrs. Dean said last weekend before she flew back to California today. "We shared everything. Our thoughts were one. We were like one person. We were together 24 hours R day.
"Now, I hardly see him. It's just visits. We can barely hold hands. I just can't get used to it. And I'm so afraid I'm not dealing with it very well"

Maureen-or Mo, as she likes to be called-was sitting in the living room of a friend's house in Virginia, not too far from where she lived when her husband worked in the White House. She stayed there during the two weeks of Dean's testimony in the Watergate coverup trial, taking advantage of every opportunity to see him, showing up almost every day in the federal courthouse. Because he was a witness, and a federal prisoner, she was not allowed to go near

"That was painful, to be that close . . ." she said.

Mrs. Dean, who was 29 on Oct. 10, is much warmer in person than photographs suggest. She is also very shy. She says she has been through a strenuous time; the tension was increased not only by Dean's imprisonment but by ber mother's ill health and a lawsuit her California neighbors have filed against her.

There is a structure over our garage-which is now an apartment and which eventually will be John's office—that our neighbors want us to get rid of," she said. "To do that, we'd have to slice off the top of the garage. It's so dumb. It makes no sense to me why they would want to sue us. It's just one more headache we really don't need."

She wore a simple bright-green knit dress and gold button ear-rings; her dark, blonde-streaked hair was drawn into a bun at the nape of her neck in the style that became familiar to viewers of the televised Senate Watergate hearings two summers ago. Then, however, it was long and platinum-colored.

"I changed it because I couldn't go anywhere without people recognizing me," she said. "So I cut it and changed the color." She laughed. "And people recognized me anyway."

She smoked one cigarette after another and sipped rose wine from a huge goblet filled with ice cubes. A friend set nearby, and Mrs. Dean's year-old toy poodle, Gucci ("because he chews shoes"). frolicked on the sofa. A radio played rock music in the background, interrupted only once by a news broadcast. The lead item was about the illness of former President Nixon.

Asked if she would like to see the former President testify at the Watergate coverup trial, Mrs. Dean said, "I would love it, of course. I don't want him to be ill. I wouldn't wish that on anybody."

Mrs. Dean's last public statement, made through a friend in Washington, came the day after President Ford issued a pardon to the former chief executive. "I did not ask for any special favor for my husband," she said. "I simply said it was unfair that those who had told the truth were in jail, and Mr. Nixon didn't even have to pay the price of truth for his pardon. I was terribly disappointed that Her face hardened, "We just want Mr. Nixon to tell the truth,"

she said. "We want him to tell the American people what happened works on the book, spends time with friends, visits her husband. She is worried about the effect Dean's imprisonment has had her mother and on Dean's 6-year-old son from an earlier marriage. "My mother adores John," she said. "She won't listen to any-one else. She feels safe when he is around—the fact that he is gone now has thrown her into a deep depression."

Dean has not seen his son, John Dean 4th, since he surrendered to federal officials in September. "It's very sad," Mrs. Dean said. Johnny knows what's going on. It's traumatic.

"He loves his father very much, but isn't able to see him. They just don't know whether it would be all right or not, what effect it would have on him. So he hasn't seen him yet. Karla (Dean's first wife, the former Karla Hennings) has done a wonderful job with him but a little boy needs a father."

Dean, she said, is healthy and in good spirits. "He has been so busy," she said. "John has a great ability to occupy his time. He reads most of the time. There are many things he wants to read and whenever I see him, he's telling me about everything he's been reading."

Mrs. Dean has worked as an airline stewardess, n Los Angeles bank employee and an advance woman for a federal study commission. In Washington, she worked as an executive aide to the director of the National Committee on Marijuana and Drug Abuse. Her first marriage was to Michael Biner of Los Angeles. Not long after the couple separated. Biner was killed in an automobile She is not comfortable with her sudden fame. People stop her in the street, on airplanes, everywhere, to ask about her husband. "Tve never had anyone say anything negative," she said. "But whenever people approach me, I get very embarrassed." Perhaps the most significant result of these very rough days, she said, is that she is beginning to think of herself as a whole, complete person. "It's been a maturing experience for me," she said. 'I'm learning again to live on my own. To be independent, And to be my own best friend. It's a slow process. But it's working."
